

Jim McCloud

Director

Jim McCloud is a member of the Board of Directors at Patient Airlift Services. Jim works as the Group Director & Vice President of Sponsorship Sales & Client Services at Major League Baseball and has also worked as a Sales Executive for CBS Sports Network in advertising sales. In his role at MLB, McCloud leads corporate sponsorship sales for MLB that focus on league partnerships across all MLB platforms including Jewel Events like the All-Star Game and Postseason, MLB.com, MLB Network and all 30 Clubs.

Jim is very experienced in the areas of public outreach and fundraising. In addition to his service with PALS, he is on the Board of Directors of the Holy Cross Baseball Diamond Club. He has made numerous appearances in front of business groups and local organizations on the behalf of non-profit charities. He has also funded and hosted a number of fundraisers over multiple years for various organizations including Golf Fights Cancer.

When Jim speaks of his work with Patient Airlift Services, he says, "PALS is a special organization that changes people's lives. I'm proud to contribute and play a small role in helping PALS transform the lives of thousands of individuals. I'm excited to see PALS continue to grow and help other individuals, as our services unfortunately will always be needed."

Jim lives in Southport, Connecticut with his wife Julie and their son and daughter. His leisure time interests include most sports, especially baseball, golf, skiing and running marathons as well as his extensive charity work.
